Antonio Vivaldi Juditha Triumphans Devicta

Juditha triumphans devicta Holofernis barbarie, RV 644, is an oratorio by Antonio Vivaldi, the only survivor of the four that he is known to have composed. Although the rest of the oratorio survives completely intact, the overture has been lost. The Latin libretto was written by Iacopo Cassetti based upon the Book of Judith. The exact date of composition and performance of Juditha triumphans are not known, but the allegorical treatment of the Venetian defense of Corfu dominated public discussion

With a Latin text by Giacomo Casetti, this oratorio was written for women soloists. Some of the arias survived with only figured bass rather than full orchestration; some performers accompany these arias only with keyboard continuo, while others orchestrate in Vivaldi 's style, which in this case includes fairly lavish use of woodwinds, brass, and tympani (in the opening chorus, where soldiers sing of "arms, slaughter, revenge, fury," and in the end).
