United Kingdom competition law is affected by both British and European elements. The Competition Act 1998 and the Enterprise Act 2002 are the most important statutes for cases with a purely national dimension. However, if the effect of a business' conduct would reach across borders, the European Commission has competence to deal with the problems, and exclusively EU law would apply. Even so, the section 60 of the Competition Act 1998 provides that UK rules are to be applied in line with Europea

As can be seen from the case examples from the House of Lords and the Practice Direction issued to the courts of England and Wales, the use of foreign cases and comparative law is widely accepted in England. While the use is regulated, in that there must be specific reasons for resorting to foreign law, its value is not underestimated.
