For the understanding of the Contemporary Art category, we must first understand the difference between the two. The term Modern Art is usually associated with art made during the period extending roughly between the 1860s and 1970s. The art made during this period celebrated experimentation and placed traditions of the past aside.

What is Contemporary Art and How Can We Define it Today ...

Here are two good rules of thumb to distinguish between the two: Modern Art is art from the Impressionists (say, around 1880) up until the 1960s or '70s. Contemporary Art is art from the 1960s or '70s up until this very minute. The year 1970 is the cutoff point for two reasons.

What is Contemporary Art? A reference to Contemporary Art meaning "the art of today," more broadly includes artwork produced during the late 20th and early 21st centuries. It generally defines art produced after the Modern Art movement to the present day. However, modern artwork is not just art produced during a specific time-frame.

Contemporary Art : Definition | IESA International

Modern art is that which was created sometime between the 1860s (some say the 1880s) and the late 1960s (some say only through the 1950s). Art made thereafter (e.g., conceptual, minimalist, postmodern, feminist) is considered contemporary. Beyond the time frames, there are conceptual and aesthetic differences between the two phases.
