Starting from the days of "buyer beware" in the early nineteenth century, Fraud: An American History from Barnum to Madoff describes the gradual construction of regulatory institutions to protect consumers and investors - from the Gilded Age through the New Deal and the Great Society. It concludes with the recent era of deregulation, which has brought with it costly frauds, including the savings and loan crisis, corporate accounting scandals and the subprime mortgage crisis.

Fraud: An American History from Barnum to Madoff

Edward J. Balleisen's conclusion for his magisterial history of organizational fraud in America is that periodic waves of adoption of "smart" anti-fraud initiatives during the course of American history have made some difference in "containing" fraud to some extent, but his history also richly documents the ultimate failure of all such initiatives to fundamentally diminish fraudulent organizational activity as an enduring feature of American life.
