The central character in Harvest of Thorns is an ex-guerrilla of the Second Chimurenga (war of liberation that ushered in Zimbabwe's independence in 1980) who is depicted by the author as having failed to integrate into the 'home' he was fighting for. This dystopian depiction of the 'home' to which the central character, Benjamin, comes back after the war does not agree with the clichéd rhetoric of nationalist narrative that sees the birth of the new nation in 1980 as the pinnacle ...
