Masks Fumiko Enchi

Masks (Japanese: 仮面, Onnamen) is a novel by Japanese author Fumiko Enchi, published in 1958. An English translation by Juliet Winters Carpenter was published in 1983. Each of the novel's three sections takes its name from a type of Noh mask. Many elements of the novel were influenced by The Tale of Genji, which Enchi had earlier translated into modern Japanese.

Masks (novel) - Wikipedia

Masks, by Fumiko Enchi, is about two psychologically twisted women. One woman, widowed, and her mother-in-law, play a twisted game of seduction and sex, using people for their own purposes, and using each other too. Enchi surrounds this novel with the paraphernalia of the Japanese Noh dramas.

Masks by Fumiko Enchi - Goodreads

I was reading a lot of Enchi Fumiko then in both translation & in the original, and loved this haunted, haunting story of thwarted love, misplaced desire, and long-term revenge. I loved the way the contemporary story was interwoven with all these stories from classical Japanese literature -- both Noh dramas as well as The Tale of Genji, especially the story of Lady Rokujo & her "living ghost."
