The PSA is used as a formative assessment in some medical schools, and as a summative assessment in others. If your medical school uses the PSA as a summative assessment, your mark will not contribute towards your UK Foundation Programme application ranking, but you must pass in order to graduate and start work as a doctor.

Prepare for the PSA

Prostate-specific antigen, or PSA, is a protein produced by normal, as well as malignant, cells of the prostate gland. The PSA test measures the level of PSA in a man's blood. For this test, a blood sample is sent to a laboratory for analysis. The results are usually reported as nanograms of PSA per milliliter (ng/mL) of blood.
