Alfred Schnittke's Piano Quintet was completed in 1976. Coming one year after the death of fellow Russian composer Dmitri Shostakovich, Schnittke's work shares much in terms of atmosphere and compositional strategy with a number of the former's late works (particularly the Viola Sonata and 15th String Quartet), which impress as apparent meditations on the composer's looming demise.

Piano Quintet, Alfred Schnittke | Articulate Silences

The Piano Quintet was composed in the wake of Schnittke's mother's death; it is dedicated to her memory. This AFCM performance has, to my ears, a powerful concept of the work. The piano is on a path of beauty and resignation, while the strings snarl and mock any easy consolation, reminding us of the harsh joys of life.

Thus, in the first movement of the Quintet, Schnittke uses the combination of the two most common types of texture in music of the mid and late 20th century - 'micropolyphony' in the string parts and 'polyphony of layers' between the piano and string parts. Also, the first violin clearly conveys the introductory motive - this can be ...

Notes ache. Tonal cadences are disorientated. The quartet take Schnittke at his word and never has his Piano Quintet felt like such the masterwork. His briefer Piano Quartet (1988), assembled around fragments of Mahler, establishes the mood music and puts these other works in their aesthetic and cultural context.-- Philip Clark, Gramophone

Alfred Garriyevich Schnittke (Russian: Альфрéd Гáрриевич Шнiтке, Alfred Garriyevich Shnitke; 24 November 1934 - 3 August 1998) was a Soviet and German composer. Schnittke's early music shows the strong influence of Dmitri Shostakovich. He developed a polystylistic technique in works such as the epic Symphony No. 1 (1969-1972) and his first concerto grosso (1977).

Composed between 1972 and 1976, and dedicated to the memory of the composer's mother, Schnittke's Piano Quintet is the most Russian in spirit of his mature works, with the exception of those employing native liturgical chant such as the Second String Quartet and the Concerto for mixed chorus.

Piano Quintet (1972-1976) | Alfred Harrievich Schnittke ...

Alfred Schnittke's Third String Quartet from 1983 is already one of the most performed works in the post-1945 repertory. This may be due on the one hand to Schnittke's considerable reputation, and perhaps also to the Quartet's use of older, more recognizable musical models. But the work's popularity may also be a result of its enormous concentration
