Socrates goes on to relate the incidence where the Oracle of Delphi was once asked if there was anyone wiser than Socrates, to which the Oracle answered that there was not. Socrates claims to have been bemused by this statement, since he always claimed that he knew nothing.

Socrates and the Oracle of Delphi | Core Spirit

"I know that I know nothing" is a saying derived from Plato's account of the Greek philosopher Socrates. It is also called the Socratic paradox. The phrase is not one that Socrates himself is ever recorded as saying. This saying is also connected or conflated with the answer to a question Socrates or Chaerephon is said to have posed to the Pythia, the Oracle of Delphi, in which the oracle stated something to the effect of "Socrates is the wisest."

This is a list of paradoxes, grouped thematically. The grouping is approximate, as paradoxes may fit into more than one category. This list collects only scenarios that have been called a paradox by at least one source and have their own article on Wikipedia. Although considered paradoxes, some of these are simply based on fallacious reasoning (), or an unintuitive solution ().

The Oracle Code adds a wonderful and challenging aspect to this Oracle origin. Barbara is angry. Nijkamp takes the subtext of adolescence (feeling isolated, feeling ignored, feeling like you have no agency), and uses Barbara's narrative of emotional and physical trauma on top to accentuate those feelings and bring that subtext into the text.
